Answer:

We know from section 3 of Digital Security Act 2018:

If there is any conflict with the provision of this Act with any provision of any other Act, then the provisions of this Act will apply to the extent it is inconsistent with any other Act.

However, for any provisions relating to right to information the provisions of The Right to Information Act 2009 (Act no. 20 of 2009) will apply.

So, if there is no conflicting issue with Right to Information Act 2009 then the provisions of Digital Security Act 2018 will apply.

A fact could be like this:

Suppose,

A motor bike rider named Emon fell into the street and a police man named Durjoy tried to help him. But Nahid captured a picture of this event and edited the picture with photoshop as like, Durjoy tried to beat him. Then by this picture Nahid exposed Durjoy badly in Facebook and got fame for capturing this bold picture. But by this Durjoy and the police force have represented wrongly on social media.

So, here provisions of Digital Security Act 2018 could apply and Nahid may punished.
