Thank you, Habibullah.

Now, the Case study and Analysis.

First of all, how we initiated our case study.

At first, we asked some questions to the alumni of our university. And then we asked some questions to the students of the university of asia pacific. Now I am going to present a summary of our investigation.

The maximum number of students from computer science are not enough interested to get a piece of clear and proper knowledge about the ACM code of ethics.
basically they thinks it's an wastage of time. Very few student thinks that they should have a proper knowledge about the Acm code of ethics. So, in Bangladesh It seems that the process of disobeying the ACM code of ethics started from student life of a software engineer.

In Bangladesh, there are very few companies are available which tries to follow the ACM code of ethics.

On the other hand, if the software engineers works for a foreign company then they always tries to follow the ACM code of ethics properly.
so that's all about from me Now tahura Nasrin will present rest of the part of this presentation.
